

Dog Trainer Academy Success Story #8

INTRODUCTION

53-year-old Amanda Lund of Seattle, Washington has been a dog lover her entire life. However, living in the city and working a typical 9-5 office job made it a challenge for her to bring a dog into her life. Knowing her living arrangements and working hours, she simply didn't believe it was fair to bring a canine companion into her home—that was until she made a move into her most recent house and her situation changed.

Upon moving to a more suburban area, Amanda forged a relationship with her neighbor, and more importantly with her neighbor's dog named Max. It was clear that the neighbor was in over her head with Max, and it wasn't long before Max's incessant barking issue started taking a toll on Amanda and her husband.

Instead of making a fuss over the issue, Amanda decided to take a different approach—she wanted to befriend Max and see what she could do to help with the problem. Over the next few months, Amanda bonded with Max over playing in the yard and long walks.

Eventually, Amanda's neighbor decided to make a move to an apartment. She had no intention of bringing Max with her and asked Amanda if she knew anyone who would be willing to take Max. Without hesitation, Amanda volunteered to take Max and he moved into Amanda's home.

THE CHALLENGE

Max went from experiencing severe neglect (aside from being fed and given water) to being showered with love and affection from Amanda and her husband. While Max deserved every bit of love and attention, this outpouring of affection spurred a new problem for Max: severe separation anxiety.

In desperation, Amanda scoured the internet for an online training program that would help her prevent Max from tearing up the backyard and causing trouble every time she left the house.

She came across Dan Abdelnoor's program, The Online Dog Trainer, and immediately put it into action. Within a month or two, Max quickly got on board with the program and was a completely different dog.

The first time Amanda was able to leave her house and Max remained calm and relaxed in the backyard, she literally danced for joy in her garage. Doggy Dan's training methods had proven themselves effective and she was hooked.

In this moment, Amanda made the realization that she wanted to help other people who were struggling with their dog's naughty behavior.

MAKING THE LEAP TO PURSUE A DOG TRAINING CAREER

Amanda's desire to become a dog trainer was deeply rooted in her desire to help dogs and their owners.

That being said, at age 53, Amanda had spent a bit of time thinking about retirement and what her situation would look like after she would decide to leave the corporate world.

Making the decision to retire is equally exciting and scary and can be a difficult decision to make, even when you're financially stable.

While Amanda still isn't ready to quit her day job, she wanted to build a solid foundation as a dog trainer so that she could continue bringing in money while doing something she loved after retirement.

A few months before making this decision, Amanda watched as Doggy Dan launched his Dog Trainer Academy—a program that teaches dog lovers how to successfully build their own dog training programs from the comfort of their home.

When the time was right, Amanda approached her husband about her desire to participate in the Dog Trainer Academy. They both agreed it would be a wonderful opportunity and Amanda jumped in headfirst and never looked back.

Within 6 months, Amanda had devoured all the Dog Trainer Academy content (while continuing to work full time) and completed her dog trainer certification.

She opened the doors to her business NorthStar Canine Coaching in May 2019.

FINDING WILD SUCCESS AS A PART-TIME DOG TRAINER

It didn't take long for Amanda to start seeing the payoff of helping dog owners in her community.

Since she opened her doors in May of 2019, she's continued to find a steady stream of clients. She's been so busy in fact, she often finds it a challenge to find time for everyone who's in need as she conducts three to four consults every weekend.

With rates of $300 per consultation, Amanda is steadily bringing in about $1,200 of extra income every single weekend.

It only took a few weekends worth of work to recoup the investment she made by enrolling in the Dog Trainer Academy—an investment that will continue to pay off as long as she’s active in the dog training community.

Amanda’s future as a dog trainer in Seattle is incredibly bright.

She not only has the ability to make an amazing impact on the dogs in her community, but she can also rest assured that she will be able to bring in a sizable income while doing something she loves when the time comes for her to retire.
